36.7 million people globally live with HIV.

Viral hepatitis is responsible for an estimated 1.4 million deaths per year.

Over 10 million people develop tuberculosis each year.

These epidemics impact the lives of tens of millions of people and represent major international public health challenges.

Moreover, these conditions are promoters and consequences of inequalities, discrimination and social injustices.

By joining UNITE, you will be contributing to:

- 1 Give a coordinated, strong and effective response towards eliminating these global threats
- 2 Ensure that these conditions are acknowledged as public health priorities with a need for integrated responses within health systems, from prevention to diagnosis, linkage-to-care, treatment and follow-up
- 3 Contribute to the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development | SDGs
- 4 End stigma and discrimination towards those living with HIV/AIDS, viral hepatitis and tuberculosis, enhancing quality of life and social justice for all
- 5 Promote research and innovation
