Luke Patey is a senior researcher at the Danish Institute for International Studies and Lead Senior Research Fellow at the Oxford Institute for Energy Studies, University of Oxford.

From Africa, Latin America, East Asia, to Europe, Patey has over a decade of on-the-ground experience following the economic and political impact of China's rise. He is author of The New Kings of Crude: China, India, and the Global Struggle for Oil in Sudan and South Sudan (Hurst/Harper Collins, 2014), short-listed for the Africa-Asia Book Prize, and reviewed in The Economist, The Wall Street Journal, and Business Standard.

Patey's work mixes deep reportage with nuanced political and business analysis. He has a track record in presenting complex subjects to non-specialist audiences in opinion writing for the Financial Times, The Guardian, The Hindu, VICE News, and through investigative reporting for outlets such as Foreign Affairs and Foreign Policy. His commentary has appeared in print with The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, Financial Times, as well as on radio and television with the Danish Broadcasting Corporation, BBC World Service, Radio France, Al Jazeera, and China Central Television (CCTV).

Patey has private sector experience with Siemens and with international organizations, including the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). He has been a visiting scholar at the Centre d'études et de recherches internationales (Paris), Peking University (Beijing), the Social Science Research Council (New York), and the Centre for Policy Research at UN University (Tokyo). Patey holds a PhD from the Copenhagen Business School.
