

24th June 2021

Dear Charles, dear Ursula, dear António,

On the occasion of the celebration of the International Lesbian Gay Bisexual and Transgender Pride Day the upcoming 28th June, and in the light of threats against fundamental rights and in particular the principle of non-discrimination on grounds of sexual orientation, we express our attachment to our common fundamental values, enshrined in Article 2 of the Treaty of the European Union.

It will be a day to remember that we are diverse and tolerant societies, committed to the unhindered development of the personality of each one of our citizens, including their sexual orientation and gender identity. It will also be a moment to celebrate that, over the last few years, we have walked a long way in favour of these principles, which we believe to be the bedrock of the European Union.

We must continue fighting against discrimination towards the LGBTI community, reaffirming our defence of their fundamental rights. Respect and tolerance are at the core of the European project. We are committed to carry on with this effort, making sure that future European generations grow up in an atmosphere of equality and respect.

Alexander De Croo

Mario Draghi

Mette Frederiksen

Nikos Anastasiades

Angela Merkel

Arturs Krišjānis Kariņš

Kaja Kallas

Xavier Bettel

Micheál Martin

Robert Abela

Kyriakos Mitsotakis

Mark Rutte

Pedro Sánchez

Sanna Marin

Emmanuel Macron

Stefan Löfven